

My bedroom is my favorite room in the house. Practically everything in my room is pink. If there is something in my room that is not pink, then there was not the option of buying it in that color. My room also has pleasant smell. Thus, the first impression I get when entering my room is that it is very ~~feminine~~

The first object that I see when walking into my room is my pink floral bedspread. It is very hard to miss my bedspread since there are pink carnation flowers all over it. My bedspread is located on my bed in the center of my room. Next, I notice my dark pink carpet. My carpet is mixed with two different types of the color pink, which are light pink and dark pink, and it really brightens up the entire room. I also see dark pink curtains that add to the amount of pink in my room. The curtains also add to the feminine feel of my room. The curtains are a light shade of pink with embroidered carnations all around the trim of the curtains.

Other objects in my room that are pink are an assortment of artificial pink carnation flowers. Even though the flowers cannot give off a scent, since they are not real, they still are great decoration for my room. Candles are another object in my room that are pink, and they are in the shape of flowers, too. The candles are used as a form of decoration surrounding my television. There are picture frames in my room that have pink borders around the pictures. One of the pictures itself is painted entirely in shades of pink. Finally, there is my clock. The clock is round, wooden, and painted in an antique shade of pink. The clock in a way looks old fashioned and adds a very interesting look to my room.

There are also objects in my room that are not pink, but ^{not} are feminine. For instance, I have three dressers. The first dresser that I see is the tallest dresser in my room. I see that dresser first because it is the closest to the entrance, ^{feminine?} It is located on the wall of the right hand side of my room. The second is my dresser with the three mirrors. This dresser is to the side of the entrance door. To add ^{to} feminine feel to it, I decorated it with flowered candles and pink snow globes. Finally, there is the small dresser. This dresser is near my bed, and my television set is on top. Other ^{things} in my room ^{that I} made look more feminine by creating a feminine feel to them ^{have (describe)} are the television, compact disc player, and DVD player. To the side of my television is my compact disc and DVD racks. They both contain many various compact disc ^{placed, not possession} s and DVD ^{same as so} s. Even though the DVD and compact disc players and racks are not feminine, I decorated them to add a more feminine look. For instance, around the television are the pink, flowered shaped candles. On top of the DVD player, I have a light pink doily with artificial flowers on top. ^{I describe} Another object in my room is my brown wooden jewelry box with pink interior. It is one of the most feminine objects in my room because it holds feminine jewelry inside.

Sight is not the only sense I experience when walking into my room. I also experience smell. When I first walk into my room, I smell an assortment of candles.

^{fragrant} (Which have a scent of berries, and the scent fills up the entire room.) I also smell the perfume scent of Sweet Pea which is the perfume that I use every day, so the scent stays ^{smells like?} in my room practically all day long. Another scent I smell in my room is the smell of hairspray. ^{very}

My room is full of the color pink and other feminine objects that make up who I am. My room is very important to me. I basically decorated my entire room by myself. So every time I enter my room, it is like looking at my own personality. There is not another room like mine. My room is all about me, which makes it a very unique and feminine room.

* coherence
- give the reader a sense of location
- connect angle

* use thesaurus for "feminine"

* don't miss opportunity to use sense details